the last nine years, we respectfully

EDITORIALS

THE last strains of the Farewell Song have faded into silence and have joined the myriad of tender and poignant memories that can only be resurrected in the new light of reminiscence. Slowly the Class of June 1935 passes through the outer gates. The huge gates shut with a clang, like a metallic warning of grim reality awakening us from a reverie of memories and regrets.

For nine years those gates have shut upon us from the opposite direction, breaking up our connection with the outside world. For nine years we have lived behind high, protecting walls. For nine years we have had everything handed to us. Now we are entering a new and chaotic world, strange and uncertain even to those who have faced it for years. The vast economic machine of our country has cracked under the weight of misdirection, and in the crash it has taken a toll of many who were experienced in the world of reality. What are we who have never faced this world to expect? We who have stood en masse so far removed from the stressing conditions of the outside world must now stand alone and face its indifference to us. No one can enter upon such a world without experiencing a tinge of fear, puzzlement, grimness, and unhappiness. All the associations we have cherished are suddenly cut off.

We have one consolation, however. The world we are about to enter is not a superficial one. We will be judged by honest standards. The modern world has no place for maudlin sentiment or partiality. Character, ability, and training are expected. With these the Girard graduate is well equipped.

The excellent training of the last nine years must now come to a test. Has what has been done for us dulled our own resourcefulness? That is the challenge.

❖ Battalion ❖

"PASS in review!"

As these three welcome words of the adjutant floated across the parade grounds for the last time, an involuntary sigh of relief arose from the immobile ranks. To the tired cadets these three words were a signal of the end of parade and a release from the rigid discipline of the battalion. But the members of the graduating class, taking part in their last parade, greeted the command with a sigh of regret. True, it was the end of rigid discipline; but strangely enough, a discipline they had learned to love.

Here come the sweeping ranks past the reviewing stand. Company D leads, and as Captain Patrick McLaughlin's sabre flashed in a salute, the marching ranks execute a snappy "eyes right." From the cool lines of khaki we pick out a few members of our own class: Second Lieutenant James Moran, Supply Sergeant Richard C. Henry, Sergeants Howard Kirk and Albert Pioso.

Company B in next, and we find four more members of our class: Supply Sergeant Donald Smith, Sergeants Robert Brown, William Norris, and George Tapper.

We raise our hands to a salute as the colors pass, and at the same time recognize Color Sergeants Russell Marshall and John Mooney.

Company C, led by Captain Russell Hess, boasts the membership of Supply Sergeant Charles Welton and Sergeant Thomas James who had the additional honor of winning second prize in the single competitive drill. William Gable, of Company A, is our only other classmate holding the position of captain, and David Kirsh, Lieutenant, the sole member occupying a staff position.

As the last echoes of "Retreat" die away, our classmates leave the ranks with unwilling feet and heavy hearts, and sadly lock up the uniforms they have so often worn.

National Honor Society

ALL schools have their students who stand out and are given recognition for their excellent character. Here at Girard, as at numerous other schools, we recognize such qualities as Leadership, Service, Scholarship, and Character by a membership in the National Honor Society. To be a member of this small select group is the dream of every Girard boy, the ideal of our student body.

Every semester the names of the new members are announced. To those who are elected comes a feeling of satisfaction and of accomplishment. But the Society members are not left to rest on their laurels; they are called upon to aid those fellows who have not reached the required standards in their studies. Along with other volunteers, they go out of their way often to help these fellows. In doing this service they not only do much good in others' behalf, but they improve the scholastic record of Girard.

In our class we have eight fellows who have attained the honor of making the Society. In our Junior-Two term Carl Michaels, Russell Hess, and Patrick McLaughlin became members. The faculty made an excellent choice when they chose these classmates of ours.

All three stood high in scholarship, and in addition were active in many extra-curriculum activities. Russell Hess is not only Valedictorian of our class, but a Captain in the battalion, and a leader in sports. Pat McLaughlin was a Captain in the battalion, and excelled in literary, oratical, and dramatic work. Carl Michaels, a possessor of the also coveted American Legion Medal, was a class officer twice, and leader of the orchestra.

When in December of 1934 the next elections were held, we were rewarded with only two members. Joseph Hutt and George A. Tapper secured the coveted honor this time. Again both stood high in scholarship. Joe Hutt was Third Honor man of the class, an officer in the Band, and twice Business Manager of the class. George Tapper, President of our class in Senior-One term and Treasurer in Junior-One, demonstrated his versatility by being active in practically every activity the College has to offer.

In our Senior-Two term we had the good fortune of having four members of our class make the Society. They were Kenneth Bower, Edward Peters, William Parry, and James Moran. All of these boys had excellent records in scholarship. Bower was noted chiefly for his work on the College publications, while Peters spent most of his time with the Dramatic Club. Bill Parry is our class president and his public service easily merits him a position in the Society. James Moran held class office two times and proved very able in handling the class finances. James also showed his leadership by leading a platoon in the battalion.

THE school literary activities have occupied a great deal of the time of many of our class and we may readily say that it was well spent.

James Buckley served as President of the Literary Club, helping much in the editing of the Girard Magazine. The associate editors of this publication were George Tapper, John Elliott, William Parry, and Richard Eckard.

During the entire term we were well-informed of the happenings in Girard through the News, and we must congratulate Kenneth Bower for editing such an excellent school paper. Nor can we forget Roy Davis as news editor, or Patrick McLaughlin, whose thrilling and accurate write-ups were well worth reading.

So that the alumni might keep in closer contact with the "hum," Kenneth Bower supplied the Steel and Garnet with campus notes.

Patrick McLaughlin came into his prime as head of the RECORD and we surely are proud of his work. Kenneth Bower, George Tapper, William Parry, Carl Michaels, and Thomas Triol were the other editors of the class book.

Aside from the school publications several members of the class won distinction in literary contests throughout their high school course. In our sophomore year we all entered the Thrift Essay contest, the winners of which were John Mooney, Kenneth Bower, and Patrick McLaughlin. Coming into the senior year we all tried our luck at writing short stories, the three most successful being Dusan Popovich, George Tapper, and Patrick McLaughlin. On our return from Washington we were required to write our impressions of the trip, and again Dusan Popovich and Patrick McLaughlin took the honors.

To Professor George Foust of the News, Dr. A. J. Stewart of the Magazine, and others who aided us in our literary work, we extend our sincere gratitude.

THE CLASS of June 1935 cannot boast of an endless list of lettermen, yet it cannot be said of us that we were inactive. Twenty-seven different fellows participated in the five major varsity sports of the school and shared from thirty to forty letters between them. Many of the fellows didn't excel in these major sports and therefore did not win the insignia which all are so proud to wear. These fellows are athletes too, and the cheers are just as rousing for them as they are for lettermen. Here is our record:

Orpheus' Disciples

AS ONE looks over the curriculum which Girard offers to its fortunate students, one notices a goodly number of subjects devoted to music. The Band with its years of tradition can muse over sixty Founder's Days. The orchestra, although comparatively recent as an organization, has proved its worth. The Glee Club has built an enviable reputation. Our Class has had more than its share of participation in these excellent organizations.

In our lower freshman year a large number of eager boys made application to secure positions in the band. During the senior term these hopes matured in full. Roy Davis was picked to fill the position of Supply Sergeant in the Senior-One term while "Ed" Peters and "Chem" Klank who performed on the clarinet and euphonium respectively were chosen to serve as Sergeants also. The Senior-Two term found John Elliott, a cornetist of some note, taking over the duties of Captain of the organization. Joseph Hutt served as First Lieutenant, and "Sam" Lyke and Herbert Moss as Second Lieutenants. Milton Parfitt was our star drummer.

In the orchestra we find "Chin" Triol as Concertmaster during the lower senior term. "Ken" Bower, William Lear, and George Brown also rendered valuable service. Carl Michaels ascended the rostrum during the Senior-Two term in the capacity of Student Leader. Harley Brotzman served as Assistant Student Leader, and Maurice Greenburg was a competent Concertmaster. William Jackson occupied the key position of the woodwind section, while James Buckley held the enviable position of Drum Major as well as being leader of the cello section.

Passing from instrumental to vocal music we find "Huck" Henry president of the Glee Club. The executive assistants were Thomas Triol, Vice-President; James Moran, Librarian, and William Lear, Secretary. Herbert Moss, Donald Smith, Albert Yost, Kenneth Bower, "Sam" Lyke, Patrick McLaughlin, Carl Michaels, Albert Pioso, Howard Kirk, Milton Parfitt, William Jackson, Russell Marshall, Edward Peters, and Roy Davis proved valuable assets to the tenor section. Down among the basses James Buckley, Henry Stapf, John Elliott, Russell Hess, "Chem" Klank, Charles Welton, Jean VanSant, and George Brown did their parts well.

Music will probably play a large part in our life when we leave this school. We realize that we have not always "played the game" when it came our turn to bat. But, for all our shortcomings, our teachers, we know, have worked doubly hard to make up for them. We wish to take this occasion to thank Mr. Carey, Mr. Frey, Mr. Banks, Mr. Pfouts, Mr. Fletcher, and Mr. Cullen for their untiring efforts and excellent work.

Dramatis Personae

"VOICE is the immortal instrument of God," some one has written, and under the skilled tutoring of Mr. Henry V. Andrews we have come to know the latent possibilities of the heavenly-inherited instrument. Indeed, the auditorium still echoes with the voices of our classmates who have ascended the speaker's rostrum or spoken across the footlights.

Dicken's immortal "Christmas Carol" brought us the first glimpse of the class' most accomplished actor in the person of Edward Peters, who portrayed the part of Bob Thatcher. Since then "Ed" has appeared in a variety of roles that have proved not only his acting ability but also his versatility.

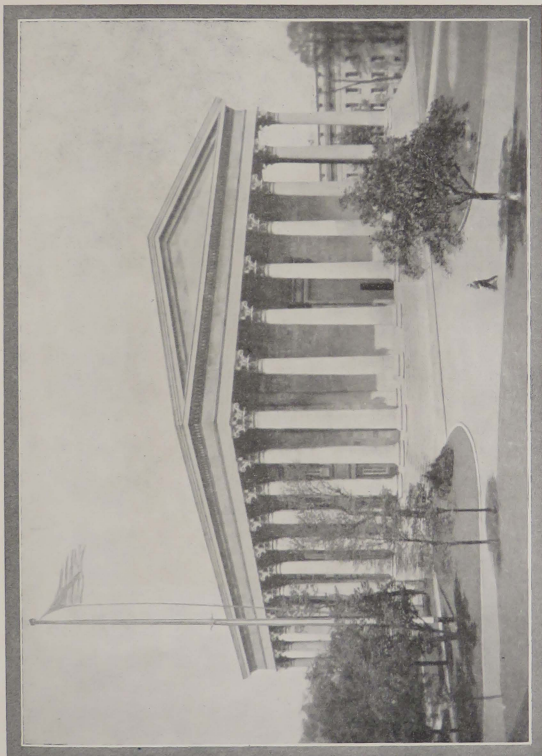

The next spring, when the curtains opened on Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," we found three members of our class on the stage. Edward Peters again held a role, that of Salarino, this time accompanied by Dusan Popovich, as Salanio, and Roy Davis, who portrayed a difficult female part.

In the 1934 Christmas play, Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," Edward Peters appeared again, as Francois, the Bishop's servant.

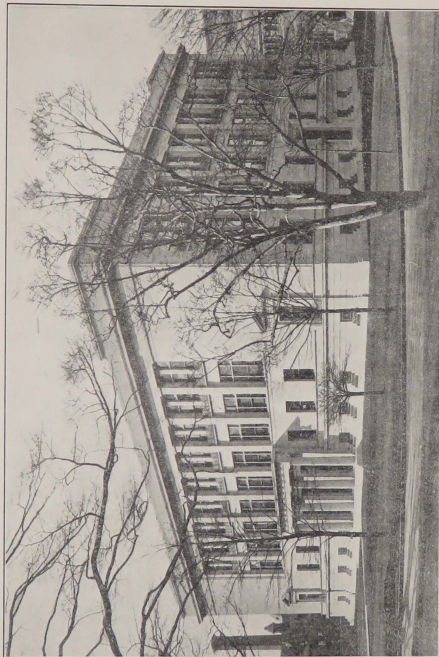

In our Senior-two term the Dramatic Club presented "Stephen Girard," in whose cast three of our classmates played leading roles. The part of Jean Duval, Girard's sea captain was carried by Edward Peters with a dash, suavity, and nonchalance almost worthy of Maurice Chevalier. When Dusan Popovich appeared in the role of the staid Quaker bookkeeper of Girard we gasped, feeling that he was badly miscast in such a role, but "Pop" played the part with such convincing reality that we wondered if we had not misjudged him. Patrick McLaughlin, making his first appearance as an actor, played the part of Charles Pomeroy, the swaggering bully, with an ease that showed him to be an actor of merit.

The Declamation Contest was held in our Senior-one term, and three of our members qualified for the finals, an exceptional record for a lower Senior class. Russel Hess spoke on "Miracles of a Mechanical Age;" James Buckley on "The Pioneer Spirit;" and Patrick McLaughlin on "The Idealism of Woodrow Wilson." Patrick McLaughlin and James Buckley won second and third prizes, respectively. For this and his other accomplishments in public speaking Patrick McLaughlin was chosen Class Speaker.
